

Frankfort Farm Hand Shot By Police

Fred Weitendorf Threatened With Fork by Farm Hand; Latter Shot In Kansas

A young farm hand by the name of Gaston, about 27 years old who has been working for about four months for Fred Weitendorf well known Frankfort farmer, got into an altercation with the latter last Tuesday and threatened him with a pitch fork. Mr. Weitendorf discharged him and the farm hand made the remark he would come back and shoot the farmer and his wife.

After the farm hand had left the place Mr. Weitendorf decided to take out a warrant for him and traced Gaston to Mokena. He found him in the Rock Island depot. When Gaston saw his former employer coming towards the depot he opened his suitcase and showed a big revolver to August Hentsch, the Mokena mail messenger, saying "They are not going to get this gun from me." At about the same time a Chicago bound passenger train pulled in and Gaston got on and went to Chicago.

On Wednesday afternoon he was seen by Harvey Frick, Mokena operator going thru on a west bound passenger. On Friday reports were received that Gaston had walked into a restaurant in Kansas City attired in wild west fashion and drawing first a Bible out of his coat pocket he threw it on a table and then pulled out his revolver and lined up all the guests alongside the wall and said he wanted to see a certain girl that had been there a year ago. In the meantime the police were called and in the fight that ensued, Gaston was shot and killed by the police.

It is thought he was insane. While at the Rock Island depot at Mokena last Tuesday he acted queer. It is said his home was in Michigan.

Frankfort Band Ready For Engagements Any Time

The Frankfort band has been putting much time and effort in getting up a real up to the minute band and they have advanced so well in this direction that they feel able to take on outside engagements. They are ready to furnish band music for various occasions. Any one wishing to secure their services can do so by getting in touch with Herbert Folkers, Frankfort.

Frankfort Industrial Club Opens Summer Dances Sat. With 347 Tickets Sold

The Frankfort Industrial Club had their first summer dance at their pavilion in the Borman grove north of Frankfort on Saturday night and sold 347 dance tickets which is considered a record breaking sale for an opening dance. The dances given by this club have been very popular for a number of years and appear to be increasing in popularity each year. The dances will be held every two weeks with special dances on the Fourth of July and Labor Day and Harvest picnic.

ILLINOIS WOOD PRESERVING CO., OPENS A PLANT AT TINLEY

The Illinois Wood Preserving Co., in which former mayor Croelius of Joliet is interested, are about to start operations in their new plant located in the old Tinley Park Spiral Wash Machine building. The new concern will manufacture creosote blocks for street paving and for use in factory buildings, and will also creosote railroad ties, poles, etc. They expect to employ a number of local men.

Part of the new plant's equipment arrived the past week and is being installed. As many manufacturing enterprises have located at Tinley Park, but never made a success of their ventures, the local people hope that this new concern will prove a success and will go over big.

HENRY DEIST OF FRANKFORT LOSES FINGERS WHEN CAP EXPLODES

Henry Deist, aged 57 years, well known Frankfort resident, figured in a peculiar and serious accident Sunday morning, as the result of a dynamite cap explosion.

A carload of anthracite coal was shipped to Frankfort over the M. C. railroad last Saturday and while the coal was being unloaded a dynamite cap was found in the coal, having been accidentally loaded in with the coal at the mines. The men engaged in unloading the car, threw the cap on the ground alongside of the car. Mr. Deist came along shortly afterwards and seeing the cap, picked it up thinking it was an automobile part and placed the cap in his coat pocket and took it home. On Sunday morning he decided to find out what was inside the cap so he took a crocheting hook and started to pick the cap, when it suddenly exploded mangleing the thumb and forefinger of his left hand. He was taken to the Silver Cross hospital by Dr. Hedges.

an opening dance. The dances given by this club have been very popular for a number of years and appear to be increasing in popularity each year. The dances will be held every two weeks with special dances on the Fourth of July and Labor Day and Harvest picnic.

AUTO COLLIDES WITH BUGGY ON MAPLE ROAD

While Tony Ankorus, who is working the Tinley farm for Louis Sass and Fred Laufer, was returning from the hospital at Joliet where he had been to see his wife who recently underwent an operation, the horse and buggy which he was driving, was struck by a big Cadillac car being driven by a Mr. Van Dayne residing near Joliet. The impact threw Mr. Ankorus out of the buggy into the ditch. Luckily he escaped serious injury. The horse was hurled on top of the radiator of the car and was so badly injured that it had to be shot. The harness was torn from the horse. The buggy was badly wrecked, all the spokes being knocked out of one of the front wheels. The headlights and windshield of the car were broken.

Mr. Ankorus saw the car coming and turned to the side of the road giving half of the road to Mr. Van Dayne, who it is said did not turn out of the road at all. Mr. Ankorus was as far over as he could drive without upsetting in the ditch.

Mr. Van Dayne claimed he failed to see the horse and buggy. The horse belonged to Mr. Laufer who places the loss of the same and the damages to his buggy at $145 and so far has not been able to get a settlement from Mr. Van Dayne he says.

The accident happened on the Maple Road near the Tinley farm on Sunday evening about 9:30 o'clock.

VOTE ON TINLEY PARK SCHOOL BOND ISSUE 8-97

The bond issue for the new Tinley Park public school was voted on Saturday night and went over big. The vote stood 8 votes against and 97 votes in favor of the proposition.

The long drawn out battle on the school question has at last been ended and the building committee will proceed at once to prepare for the new building. The present school is to be torn down and the new building will be located on the same site.

Building operations are to be commenced soon as possible as the new building is to be completed by the first of September.

CARLOS HALL OF MOKENA WINNER IN PRIZE ESSAY CONTEST

Carlos Hall, a student in the Mokena public school won a prize in the prize essay contest conducted by the Prentiss-Wabers Stove Co., of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., manufacturers of camp stoves, on the subject "Why Auto Camping Has Become a Popular Recreation."

The blanks for entry into this contest were supplied by the Mokena Hardware Co. The prize awarded was a silver ever-sharp lead pencil. The prize was won in competition with thousands of children in the seventh and eighth grades of schools in every part of the United States. Elements considered in judging the essays were: first, number of good reasons given for auto camping having become a popular recreation; second, neatness; third, penmanship. The prize winning essay is as follows:

WHY AUTO CAMPING HAS BECOME A POPULAR RECREATION

Auto tourists usually have an objective camping point, for the outdoor camp lends zest and novelty, is healthful and inexpensive.

Camping paraphernalia has been too complicated and cumbersome to be utilized conveniently enroute, and suitable camping places ordinarily unavailable.

Interested manufacturers have handicapped by providing, at reasonable cost, outfits for camp and cooking clean and sanitary, compact, easily and quickly packed, unpacked and adjusted, while public spirited citizens have provided convenient, free camping grounds along the route.

Auto camping has become more than popular. It has become almost a necessity for health and recreation.

Rev. Kreis Will Preach the Baccalaureate Sermon To Mokena Students May 25

The annual Baccalaureate sermon will be preached by Rev. Wm. Kreis at St. John's Evangelical church on Sunday evening, May 25.

HOW "STICKING-TO-IT" GAINED A PLACE AT TOP

"I can write a better story than that!"

Did you ever make this declaration after reading a story? Nearly everyone at some time in life has a desire to write. James Fenimore Cooper was already past life's half-way point when one night, after finishing a book, he said to his wife, "I can write a better story than that!" And he did. He wrote and rewrote until publishers recognized his ability. The secret was that he stuck to it.

Some years ago in Halifax, Nova Scotia, a young girl, a direct descendant of the author of the "Leatherstocking Tales," spent most of her spare time writing fairy tales for her own amusement. These highly imaginative stories of child life, animals and goblins she sent to the St. Nicholas league, then a feature of St. Nicholas magazine. She stuck to it and it was not long before she began to carry off many of the prizes offered each month by the league.

After leaving college she set out determined to make writing her career. In New York she found magazine editors flooded with material and was told abruptly that there was not a chance. Still undaunted, she offered her services as a stenographer to a publisher and agreed to work for nothing on condition that her stories receive the attention of the manuscript readers.

Barely a month had passed before the same editor who turned her away without a hearing was buying her stories. Nearly everything she wrote was accepted, and before long other publishers sought to buy her articles. She succeeded because she stuck to it. She had always liked to write and she wanted to write stories for children. She patterned her stories after those she had loved as a child, and she believed other children would learn to love her stories.

This is the story of Mary Graham Bonner, whose "Daddy's Evening Fairy Tales" are familiar to the readers of The News-Bulletin. With their goblins, fairies, talking animals and whimsical situations, these stories are a constant source of delight to children, who are always eager to have read to them "just one more" of Miss Bonner's charming accounts of these strange little people.

MANGLED BODY OF MEXICAN FOUND ON J TRACK NEAR MATTESON

Last Friday morning while three section men from Frankfort were doing some extra work on the E. J. & E. tracks a mile west of Matteson they found the mangled body of a Mexican laborer lying in the middle of the west bound track. It is supposed that he got on a freight at Joliet and had attempted to get off at Brisbane but found the train was going to fast so he was carried by to Matteson and got off there when the train slowed down and in attempting to get a west train he missed his hold and rolled under the cars unnoticed by the train crew. The body was taken to a Chicago Heights undertaking establishment. The Frankfort men who found the body were: Arthur Bauman, Henry Knipple and Mr. Shaw.

Frankfort Industrial Club Completes Memorial Day Program for 1924

The Frankfort Industrial Club has about completed all arrangements for the annual observance of Memorial Day. As usual the program will be held at the local public school yard commencing at 1 o'clock. The speakers of the day will be Elmer Bielfeldt and H. Rehn both of Joliet, the latter being the newly nominated State's Attorney of Will County. In addition to this the local band will furnish special music and the school children will take part in the exercises, also special singing by a quartet. The graves of the soldiers buried in the Pleasant Hill cemetery will be decorated by the school children. Brief exercises will be held at the cemetery. All of the business places in town will remain closed for half a day, the local banks remaining closed all day.

BUILDING BOOM ON AT TINLEY PARK

Tinley Park is on the verge of the biggest building boom in its history. A new public school is to be erected this summer. George Schreiber is about to tear down his old shoe shop and will erect a neat up-to-date shoe store and repair shop in its place. The new building will be one story in height and will be constructed of red concrete brick and concrete stone faced trimmings. The main room will be used for a modern shoe store where the latest and best in footwear will be on display while in the rear of the store there will be a modern repair shop. This is a real note worthy improvement for Tinley Park.

H. F. Bruggemann, local grain dealer is also making an important improvement by way of installing a new grain scale. He has moved his grain office which he is going to tear down and replace with a new building this summer.

Fred Manzke and Julius Shafer have already started building operations on their new homes in the Vogt sub-division. Carl Miller, local contractor and mason is also erecting a fine new concrete residence.

A number of other buildings may be erected before the summer is over.

ALL YE GAME LOVERS HIE YOURSELVES TO MARLEY ON MAY 22 FOR A BIG TIME

The Marley Brotherhood, that energetic body of live wires which has placed Marley on the map more than once, is going to put on an entertaining program at the Marley church on the evening of May 22nd when the disciples of Isaac Walton that famous sportsman of old, will show the public just what is doing in the line of sport in Will County.

E. C. Bassett, President of the Will County Chapter of the Isaac Walton League of Joliet, will put on a moving picture of some of this county's most famous beauty spots, also a fine lot of scenes from hunting and fishing. Ralph C. Austin, well known Joliet attorney will give an address, explaining these pictures as they are thrown on the screen. The Will County Chapter is one of the largest of this league in this country and their work will be fully explained by the pictures and the speakers.

A musical program of new and old popular numbers will be supplied by a Joliet male quartet.

Ice cream and cake will be served and a nominal admission fee will be charged. All interested in outdoor sports in the line of fishing and hunting are urged to attend and to bring their friends. Don't forget the time and place. Eight p. m. sharp is the starting time.

There are quite a number of Waltonians in this section and it is hoped more members will be enrolled from this section after seeing and hearing this program.

Mrs. James Cooper Is Appointed Administratrix

Mrs. Kate Cooper, widow of the late James Cooper of Mokena, was appointed administratrix of her husband's estate on Thursday by Judge Samuel J. Drew in the Will County probate court at Joliet. Mr. Cooper died without leaving a will.

The Cooper estate consists of 80 acres of farm land near Mokena and personal property valued at $8,500. The legal heirs are Mrs. Cooper and her five children, Thomas, Elmer, Everett and Cella Cooper and Mrs. Cora H. Gorham. As administratrix Mrs. Cooper gave bond in the sum of $17,000.

SEGOEA CLASS OF WORTH ELECTS OFFICERS

The Seagoa Class of the Worth M. E. church has elected the following officers for the next six months: President, Elmer Lysen. Vice-President, Hazel Stromberg. Secretary, Raymond Russert. Treasurer, Elsie Prellar.

The class, which meets regularly every Sunday morning at ten o'clock under the leadership of the pastor, is growing rapidly. All of the young people of the community are cordially invited to join.

New Exhibit and Fair Grounds For Will County

For many years Will County has been without a County Fair and at present has no exhibition ground where farmer, manufacturer and the public can get together.

For a long time there has been talk of reviving the old fair, but nothing ever came of it. Recently, however, the many friends of Geo. F. Powers, well known Joliet contractor and member of the firm of Thompson-Powers Construction Co., prevailed on him to take the lead in promoting a fair for Will County. Mr. Powers has purchased a large tract of land on Rowell Avenue and Mills Road. Other business men of Joliet have become interested in the project and the Northern Fair and Amusement Association has been incorporated for $200,000. Stock is now being sold in this project.

This enterprise is being sponsored by Mr. Powers who is making the project an open proposition and is submitting it to the public, allowing everyone an opportunity to cooperate in making this a big forward step for Will County.

On these exhibition grounds it is being planned to establish training quarters for race horses which will be in year around demand on account of its convenient proximity to Chicago and would employ 100 to 200 men regularly and would draw on local farms for the food necessary to keep a large quantity of stock.

It is planned to erect on the grounds a group of permanent exhibition buildings in which can be adequately displayed the products of the community. There will be buildings in which to exhibit home products, such as fancy needlework, and specimens of the culinary art, buildings for agricultural displays where all may come to get acquainted with the things that make this section of the state foremost in importance. There will be buildings, of course, for the stock exhibits have so long been missing here abouts and buildings for individual displays where school children as well as the general public may learn just what Joliet is doing in a manufacturing way.

There will be ample provision made for baseball, basketball, football, year around swimming in a fine clean pool, year around dancing under proper supervision and band concerts, drill team exhibits, auto racing, auto polo, and last but not least, good horse racing conducted along good clean lines. It is hoped that this project will go over big as it should.

Mr. Powers is known to Mokena, being the owner of a fine farm just northwest of Mokena.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE HUMAN SPIDER

ALONG the devious highways where the lights are blazing, in the by-ways where mystic shadows are, and the witchery of semi-darkness exerts its seductive spell, in the salons of precious woods and gildings, in the dingy hovels, the human spider is ever watching and waiting for victims.

His sole purpose in life is to gorge himself and fatten upon the unsuspecting or adventurous who by their own folly become entangled in his web, an exquisite, airy abode of silver threads when viewed from the outside, but a carnal house filled with horrors to those imprisoned within.

Before the dupe has penetrated very deeply into the web, a nauseous sense of fear oppresses him, but he laughs it away and ventures forth gay-hearted, confident of his craftiness to break the bonds and go free whenever he may be so inclined.

But his quest of riches and pleasures must be continued. The spider has assured himself that his fondest desires shall be realized. Even now the sticky web is clinging to the victim's feet, shutting out the light from his eyes and smothering his breath.

When at last he comprehends he is imprisoned, it is not without dismay that he finds himself in a hopeless condition, terrified to the core of his fluttering heart as he tugs and pulls with desperation to break the silken threads being spun around him and slowly strangling him to death.

At the spider's behest the fool has played fast and loose in the sunniest days of his existence. Having been so bound up with the one master-thought that he could falsify and pilfer without being suspected, gamble with money that was not his own, delude his trustful wife and his employer, he awakens with a start to find himself in a house of many winding stairways from which he cannot possibly escape.

The changelings who would have you believe they are men of rare cunning, fall with frequency under the spell of the spider, though even the wise now and then are fooled and humbled.

Nothing but evil is to be had from the scheming spider who invites you to "walk in" in Simple Simon fashion and "make yourself at home." Every day the spider is planning mischief.

The Romance of Words

"MAYOR"

ONE of the most interesting and best-phrased explanations of this title occurs in a book written, strange as it may seem, in 1855—Vorstege's "Restitution of Decayed Intelligence."

"This honorable name of office," says the author, "in the chief and most famous city in our realm is written in divers wales. Some writ it 'major,' some 'mayor' and some 'Maire.' And because major in Latin signifieth greater or bigger, some, not looking any further, will needs from thence make it major. But, seeing the names of sheriff and alderman cannot be drawn from the Latin, why should it be thought that mayor cometh from major? Certain it is that as the other names of office are not derived from the Latin, no more is this. For the etymology thereof we are to note that in our own English to 'may' is as much as to say a 'haver' or possessor of might—one that hath and may use authority."

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a man like this proposed to you?

Symptoms: Short, trig, full of pep, good dresser. Sensitive, charming, never wants to sit home, always wants to "go somewhere" else. Leaves a play if he doesn't like first act, leaves a restaurant if he doesn't like his waiter, raises a row anywhere—always has some fuss wherever he goes. You sit in fear and trembling lest the steak is too rare or the egg is too soft.

IN FACT

He, being short, has a horror of being thought soft.

HERE ARE SOME SOUPS

CUT up six white onions and fry in a tablespoonful of butter until light brown. Add a quart of water and a pint of milk, season with one teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper, a teaspoonful of sugar and a pinch of mace. Cook slowly for an hour and strain; beat four eggs until light, add a cupful of cream and a tablespoonful of cornstarch mixed with a little cold water; cook until the starch is well done before adding the eggs and cream. Just heat but do not boil or the eggs will be curdled.

THE THINGS OF EVERY DAY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE little things of every day Make up the sum of living; The father's toil, the children's play, The loving and the giving. We plan so many mighty things, But plans go wrong and wealth takes wings; Yet time can never take away The little things of every day.

The little things of every day Are what we most remember; The April grass, the rose of May, We cherish in December. Some word, the first the baby said, Some lullaby, some path we tread, The only things that ever stay Are little things of every day.

The little things of every day Make life a joy or sorrow, The things we do, the things we say, Are memories of tomorrow. Whatever pinnacle we choose, What wealth we win, what wealth we lose, The things that never pass away Are little things of every day.

Quick Soup. Take a can of pea soup and a can of condensed milk—that which is less sweet is more desirable. Mix well, heat hot and serve with crackers.

Cream of Barley Soup.

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, and cook three minutes, stirring steadily. Then add one cupful of pearl barley and cook two minutes. Add slowly one pint of boiling water and one of milk, stirring until well-blended and simmer gently for one hour. Rub through a sieve, return to the heat and add three pints of chicken stock, one tablespoonful of cornstarch mixed with a little cold water. Boil until the starch is well cooked and serve hot.

Condensed milk added to a canned pea soup, heated hot and served with fingers of toast makes fine cup of soup for a chilly night.

A cupful of mashed potatoes blended well with a little cream, added to a quart of hot milk, seasoned with butter, pepper and salt is another quick, nourishing and tasty soup to serve as a supper dish.

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

JUDGING from the infant mortality amongst them, the gods must love these early-blooming spring romances.

There appear to be two kinds of preachers: those who teach you how to live so that you will not fear death—and those who want you to live so that you will cheerfully welcome death.

Oh, miraculous youth! To be able to live on the memory of a kiss for 24 hours—and to warm the memory over again the next day!

The first kiss always brings a lump in a man's throat—but it's the last kiss that leaves a lump in a woman's throat.

No matter for what unconscious or unconscionable reason a woman may glance at a man, he always interprets her look as a glance of admiration.

Somehow, the smaller a man's heart, the more trivial and foolish little love affairs he seems to be able to pack into it.

There are three kinds of men in the world: the kind a girl dreams of marrying; the kind her mother expects her to marry; and the kind that she finally succeeds in marrying.

A man's idea of "diplomacy" is to do as he pleases, and then stay away, until, in her anxiety to know whether he is dead or alive, a woman has completely forgotten her indignation.

The hardest words for a man to utter and the easiest for a woman to believe are—"I love you!"

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SWAMP WHITE OAK

"Sometimes," said the Swamp White Oak, "I've heard mothers telling their children they must not get their feet wet."

"Or, if they have got their feet wet, I hear them being told to come home at once and change their shoes and stockings so they will not catch cold."

"That seems so funny to me, so funny, Billie Brownie."

Billie Brownie had gone to call on the Swamp White Oak, and Billie was sitting curled up in one of its small branches.

Billie had not liked to say that he didn't care to stand in the swamp for he was afraid it might hurt the Swamp White Oak's tree feelings!

He thought perhaps it might be rude so he had said:

"Oh, may I sit on one of your branches? It would be so comfortable, I feel sure."

And the Swamp White Oak had agreed.

"Of course," Billie Brownie said, in answer to the Swamp White Oak's speech, "people do catch cold when they get their feet wet and you don't catch cold."

"If you sneezed and coughed and had to blow your nose you might feel different."

"That is the thing that happens when people catch cold and it is most uncomfortable."

"I've never seen a tree with a cold and I don't suppose a tree could have a cold."

"I've never heard that they sold handkerchiefs in stores for trees and I've never heard a tree sneeze, nor seen one blow its nose."

The Swamp White Oak laughed.

"No, we trees never catch cold. But, of course, all trees would not like it in the swamp as I do."

"I'm the special oak which likes swamp life. And I wouldn't be happy anywhere else. I amuse myself in all sorts of little ways."

"I shed my bark and it curls up and shows bright green underneath."

"It's rather an untidy habit but it amuses me. When I am young you do not notice this habit as my foliage covers all this up."

"But dear me, we can't all act just alike. What a dull world it would be if we did."

"There I agree with you absolutely," said Billie Brownie.

"I think," he added, "one of the reasons the world is so interesting is because so many have different ways."

"But I gather from your remark," the Swamp White Oak said, "that you do not agree with me about wet feet!"

"Nothing makes me happier than to stand in wet ground all the time."

"I was given the name of Swamp White Oak because I am a white oak tree which loves swamps."

"Yes, I like to stand in swamps and to feel the cool, wet ground under me."

"That is what I like above everything else, and when you see me or any of my family you will know how happy we are with our wet feet—or wet roots, perhaps you'd better say."

"Yes," said Billie Brownie to himself, after he had said good-by, "the world is filled with different tastes!"

So They Will Not Catch Cold.

MARRIED TWELVE YEARS BEFORE BABY CAME

Gladly Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Nebraska.—"I was married twelve years before my boy was born. I had a lot of female troubles and had been treated by a physician for them but they continued much the same. Then I read your advertisement in the newspapers and thought I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a good trial, for if it had helped others, why not me? I have taken 36 bottles of the medicine and am never without it in the house. My baby boy is three years old now and I sure am happy since I got relief from my troubles. New Treatment for Varicose Veins and Ulcers

Swollen veins are dangerous and often burst. Sufferers are advised to get a two-ounce, original bottle of Emerald Oil (full strength), at any pharmacist and start to reduce the veins and bunched at once.

Physicians recommend Emerald Oil; it is used in hospital practice and a small bottle will last a long time, because it is very concentrated and a little goes a long way. Apply night and morning with a soft brush as directed until the swelling is reduced to normal.

So marvelously powerful is Emerald Oil that swollen glands and even goitre disappear when used steadily.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Mr. James H. Allen, of Rochester, N. Y., suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work. He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system. He freely gave his discovery, which he called Allen's, to others who took it with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. He has therefore instructed druggists everywhere to dispense Allen's with the understanding that if the first pint bottle does not show the way to complete recovery he will gladly return your money without comment.

Four-Tube Amplifier Circuit.

By THOMAS W. BENSON

The principle of neutralized tuned radio frequency amplification is utilized in the circuit given in the attached illustration to form a receiver that is nonradiating, selective, has good range and volume and is easy to build and operate.

The most interesting part of the circuit is the method of constructing the inductances and the source of the current used to prevent oscillations in the circuit. It will be noted that two inductances are shown in the diagram shunted by .0005 mfd. condensers for tuning. These inductances are termed amplifiers and are made from 75-turn honeycomb coils in the following manner:

Take a 75-turn coil and strip off 2 turns, then count back 15 turns on the coil and carefully raise the wire and take a tap; this tap is lettered C. Now count back 15 more turns and make another tap, B. It is not necessary to unwind the coils to take these taps. The coils are then clamped between two pieces of bakelite 2½ inches square in which have been drilled holes to mount terminal posts.

The inside end of the coil goes to post A, the second tap made to post B, and the first tap to post C and the outside end of the coil to tap D. The first coil does not need tap B taken out and this coil has but three terminals, A, C and D.

For convenience in mounting a hole is drilled in the corner of the bakelite end pieces and a small brass angle bolted to the coil so the coils can be mounted on one of the terminals of

Make Rheostat Serve in Place of Potentiometer

By JULIUS PHILLIPS

Wherever a potentiometer is used there is a constant drain of current from the "A" battery, even when the set is not in use. This is particularly true when a potentiometer of low resistance is employed. To overcome this, an "A" battery switch may be inserted in one of the filament leads to disconnect the battery from the set when not in use. This switch, however, is not necessary and can be eliminated. Only one side of the potentiometer is connected to the battery, the other side going to one terminal of the rheostat. When the rheostat is turned to the "off" position, the potentiometer is also disconnected. The extra resistance of part of the potentiometer is added to that of the potentiometer, but as this is only one or two ohms and as the rheostat is varied very little after the correct position has been found, it will make no difference in the functioning of the potentiometer. The diagram shows all connections clearly.

Elbow Antenna Serves Where Space Is Limited

The portable aerial shown in the accompanying sketch supersedes the loop aerial and has a distinguished feature in that it can be placed in any position and be made of any size the condensers. In mounting the coils they should be mounted at right angles to reduce any coupling between them to zero.

The connection to the rest of the apparatus is made as shown in the diagram. The neutralizing condenser is a small midget variable condenser mounted on the panel. The rest of the circuit presents nothing really new.

As to the theory of its operation. The 15 turns of the first coil between C and D form an untuned primary circuit and by reason of the inverse aerial connection grounds the negative filament reducing body capacity. The condenser tunes the remainder of the first inductance which is the grid input to the radio frequency tube.

The plate circuit of the radio frequency tube includes 15 in the second coil and forms an untuned plate circuit closely coupled to the tuned input circuit of the detector. It will be noted, however, that the portion of the coil between C and D is neither in the plate or grid circuit, but is closely coupled to both. The end of the coil is connected through the stabilizing condenser to the grid of the radio frequency tube. Now should there be any tendency of the plate circuit to feed back to the grid through the tube capacity it is neutralized by an equal and opposite feed back obtained from the extra winding on the coil. Perfect stability can be obtained by the adjustment of the stabilizing condenser.

But this condenser is mounted on the panel for a very good reason. We could mount it fixed behind the panel, but by making it adjustable a gain in volume and selectivity is obtained. It is well known that the greater the tendency of a radio frequency amplifier to oscillate the greater the amplification, but the instant oscillations start the amplification stops. Therefore when a signal is picked up, a slight adjustment of the stabilizing condenser is made to slightly unbalance the circuit when the signals will be greatly strengthened and the circuit can be put "right on edge," so to speak. It would not be practical to keep the circuits in this critical condition while tuning, for the set would go into oscillation without warning, but when a station is picked up it is entirely practical to push the circuit up to the edge of oscillating, but not beyond.

The receiver is remarkably easy to handle and gives results equal to any four-tube set built. It possesses all the stability of the neodyne as well as the selectivity and, in addition, permits the slight unbalancing of the superdyne and teledyne circuits that accounts for their efficiency.—New York World.

desired. On the top of a roof or from the side of a window it will adapt itself, and take very little room.

the pole P to rod D which is held by a spring hinge to R. W. S. are wall insulators placed along the rod D whose duty it is to insulate the aerial wires from the rod. L. I. are the lead-in wires and P. F. a plate for fastening the pole in place. H is a common door hinge used so as to give free run to the aerial wires in case of heavy wind.—Radio News.

Reversing Plate Coil Brings Good Results

Regardless of the form of inductance used in tuning the plate of a regenerative set it is always worth while to try reversing the connections to this variometer, coil or whatever may be used. Such a change often increases signal strength, clears signals and improves reception generally. In a honeycomb coil set an improper connection here will prevent regeneration.

Love and Wrath

By REV. J. T. RALSTON, D. D.
Dean of the Correspondence School,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—But God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, being now justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him.—Rom. 5:8-9.

The two words of the title seem to be in contradiction. A simple, logical and natural interpretation of the passage would be that these two things are spoken of as manifested by the same person—God.

One of the most common aspects of human nature is that it tends to excess, the pendulum swings too far in one direction or another. Many of the older theologians and teachers made much of the wrath of God; they spoke their anathemas as some pope would speak them. With them the method of the bludgeon was the best. Many of the later theologians and teachers, probably including most modern preachers, make much of the love of God and they preach love, as they call it. They quote very glibly and very frequently all the Scripture expressions in which love is prominent. In quoting Romans 5:8 they entirely overlook verse 9. The beatitudes of the fifth of Matthew are flouted before the multitudes, as also the thirteenth of I Corinthians. God is so certainly and strongly set forth as a God of love that there is no place for Him as a God of consuming fire. Now in these days when the excesses of men are to be guarded against, it is wise to guard against excessive emphasis on either love or wrath, or, to put it negatively, the minimizing of the one or the other.

Love Commended.

What is said of the love of God? It is commended by God. "In that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." Men dying in sin, already condemned, God loving them enough to send His Son to die for them. What love! Love not for lovable persons, not as a response to love on the part of men, but love in spite of hate toward God, in spite of love for the things God hates. We cannot but notice the form of the expression of that love—"In that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." It is utterly impossible to praise God's love too much. God was under no obligation to send His Son to die for men, nor to show mercy of any kind, but He loved so much.

Saved From Wrath.

But there is another side to the picture. "We shall be saved from wrath through Him." We need only to recall the words of Jesus Himself as recorded in John 3:36. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." Let us note very carefully the solemn words, "Saved from wrath." In the passage in John we find the wrath of God already the portion of some and we know from Scripture that a wrath of God is yet to come; so we have present wrath and impending wrath. Present wrath is something that is provided for by the great love of God. If man does not respond to the appeals of God, that wrath hangs over him perpetually. But it need not hang there. The moment a man accepts Jesus Christ as Savior, that wrath is taken away.

But there is another aspect of wrath that cannot be overlooked—the aspect of the coming wrath. A study of the last few days of the earthly life of our Lord gives proof of love such as the world has never seen, but even then He pronounced a future wrath on Jerusalem and those who were putting Him to death. Who can fully understand the meaning of the words, "Your house is left unto you desolate"? Beautiful Jerusalem! Royal Jerusalem! To be in a few years utterly destroyed, the burial place of more than a million human beings! Wrath! Wrath!

The coming wrath has its intimations in the late awful war, in the present conflicts of human society all over the world, in multitudes suffering the pangs of starvation, and the destruction of hundreds and thousands by earthquakes. The race of mankind is filling up its cup of wrath. Let not the woes pronounced by the prophets on Edom, Tyre, Israel, Judah and Jerusalem be forgotten. Let not the woes uttered by Jesus, Himself the very incarnation of the love of God, on the Pharisees and Sadducees be forgotten.

In emphasizing the love and wrath of God, let not the pendulum swing too far in either direction, but let it reach each limit of its oscillation; else the whole machinery of human destiny will be ruined.

The Wonder of It!

In one thousand trials it is not five hundred of them that work for the believer's good, but nine hundred and ninety-nine of them, and one besides.—George Muller.

Indispensable

The Bible has been the Magna Charta of the poor and oppressed. The human race is not in a position to dispense with it.—Thomas Huxley.

By reason of the fact that she speaks from her long experience as a professional nurse, the statement of Mrs. J. Clark, of 415 Walsworth Ave., Oakland, Calif., will be of interest to all who are in need of an upbuilding tonic.

"In all my fifteen years' experience as a trained nurse," says Mrs. Clark's statement, "I never found the equal of Tanlac as a stomach medicine and tonic. Two years ago an attack of influenza left me without appetite and my stomach in such a bad fix that the little I did eat seemed to do me harm instead of good.

"Stomach pains would make me so weak I would feel right faint. The least exertion would completely exhaust me and six months before taking Tanlac I was so weak I had to hire my housework done. I was in bed most of the time for two months and was getting desperate.

"Tanlac was more than a match for my troubles and eight bottles left me feeling fine. I eat and sleep like a child and have energy and strength that makes life a pleasure. Tanlac is simply grand."

If You Need a Medicine

You Should Have the Best—

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

STAGGER FIGURES ON AUTO LICENSE PLATES! MAKE THEM EASIER TO READ, Says Walter P. Chrysler

Better Color Combinations Also Needed—Car Thefts, and Escape of Reckless Drivers Would Both be Decreased.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER believes that by using the right combination of colors and by staggering the figures on automobile license plates and by using a letter to get rid of one figure, a practical plan can be evolved whereby police and others can quickly read and remember license plates.

"It is practically impossible for the average person to remember five or six figures like '749826' or '84729'," said Mr. Chrysler, in elaborating upon his idea. "But scientists have proved by a series of tests that it is easy to see and read and remember a combination like '749' and '867'. A single letter is also easy to remember.

"Recently in New York the police complained that the gray and white color combination selected by the state for the 1924 license plates was such that the plates which are really dust colored could be seen but a short distance away. The first mistake was in the selection of colors. Physicists tell us that the combination of yellow and black gives the greatest visibility and the second choice is orange and black.

"During the present year 26 states are using white numerals for figures with a combination of cream, blue, green, gray, tan, yellow, maroon, orange, red, aluminum, gold and vermilion backgrounds. Eleven states are using black backgrounds with white numerals and other states are using brown, bright yellow, orange, maroon, blue and aluminum for the numerals.

"Illinois has a good license plate with bright yellow numerals and a black background. That is one of the best of all color combinations. Idaho has a good one with lemon yellow background and a black numeral. Indiana and Maryland use orange numerals with a black background, Michigan black numerals on a yellow background, Missouri and New Mexico black numerals on an orange background.

"States could very well stick to the yellow and black and orange and black combinations. There is enough difference to make them easy to distinguish from year to year.

"In times of accidents and traffic violations police are frequently in want of license plate numbers. It is to the interest of motor car owners that they should have them.

"Criminals frequently make use of stolen cars; another reason why

Walter P. Chrysler

Plates should be easy to read. "Operatives in search of stolen cars frequently have to rely on license plates alone.

"The conscientious motor car owner and driver is among the first to advocate better means of identifying cars. It is only the careless and the reckless who oppose such measures as these and they are as much of a menace to the motorist as to the pedestrian."

Mr. Chrysler is president and chairman of the board of directors of the Maxwell and Chrysler Motor Corporation.

License Plate Visibility Classified by States

DAIRYMEN PASS RESOLUTIONS

At the regular monthly meeting of the Mokena Local of the Milk Producers Association, held in Frankfort Hall, on May 1st, 1924 the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, vigorous efforts are being made by certain organizations and individuals for the tuberculin testing of our cows, and WHEREAS, the financial losses resulting from such test would doubtless be great,

WHEREAS, all the milk marketed from our dairies is pasteurized before reaching the consumer and WHEREAS, the tuberculin test is found, from our investigation, to be unreliable;

NOW AND THEREFORE, be it resolved by the members of the Mokena Local of the Milk Producers Association assembled in regular monthly session in Frankfort, Illinois this first day of May, Nineteen hundred and twenty-four,

FIRST—that we hereby declare ourselves opposed to the testing of our cattle for tuberculosis, until such a time as the State or Federal Governments or both combined are prepared to promptly and substantially remunerate us for losses sustained through the condemnation and subsequent slaughter of animals eliminated from our herds as so called re-actors.

SECOND—that we are opposed to the employment of our county board of a so called veterinarian for the purpose of testing our cattle for tuberculosis.

THIRD—that our Secretary is hereby instructed to forward copies of this resolution to Supervisors Lankenau, Bettenhausen and Seehausen; to the Will County Farm Bureau office and for publication to our organization paper, the Milk News.

Hundreds At Funeral of Worth Crossing Victim

Hundreds of friends, neighbors and relatives packed the Worth M. E. church last Saturday afternoon to pay their tributes of respect to the memory of Howard Stromberg who met a tragic death early Thursday morning when the auto he was driving was struck by a Wabash Flyer on the crossing south of the depot.

The funeral services were in charge of Rev. Benedict, pastor of the Worth Methodist church who preached a sermon full of comfort and hope. The choir sang a number of selections. The floral offerings were beautiful and profuse.

Burial took place in Hazelgreen cemetery.

The deceased was born in Worth 24 years ago and lived here practically all his life. He was highly respected and was always active and ambitious and will be greatly missed from his community.

He is survived by his sorrowing mother, Mrs. Emma Stromberg, 4 sisters; Mrs. Childs, Mrs. Nillel, and Mrs. Chapman all of Chicago and Miss Hazel of Worth, four brothers, Oscar, Frank, and Oliver of Chicago and Clarence of Blue Island.

He had been working in West Harvey at the Engles-Sheppard machine shop and was staying with his brother in Blue Island.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Emma Stromberg and family wish to thank their many friends for the kindness shown them in their recent bereavement.

MOKENA

The annual Clean-Up campaign is on in Mokena. The village board has engaged a man to haul away all the rubbish and each resident is asked to place all rubbish in boxes, barrels or sacks and place same where they can be easily picked up. The rubbish will be hauled this week.

The New Lenox Royal Neighbors will present their play, "Much Ado About Betty" at the St. John Evangelical church parlors next Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of this church.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hensel have been entertaining guests from Chicago the past week.

Mrs. Jackson and daughter of Kansas City are visiting at the L. Rosenberg home. From here they will go to New York to visit with another daughter.

On Sunday they, accompanied by Mrs. Rosenberg, went to Racine, Wisconsin to visit with relatives there. Mrs. Rosenberg sang at the Mothers' Day services at the Swedish M. E. church which attended in her childhood days.

Barney Hostert and his parents attended the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. Whiskers at Aurora who died last Friday.

The Mokena Home Improvement Club will meet on May 22nd at the home of Mrs. Wm. Lynk.

The Mokena Nines are good for something else besides playing baseball as was discovered last Thursday evening when they came into the News-Bulletin office and assisted the circulation department in folding papers as that is a stunt we yet must do by hand until that mysterious Ship brings us a machine that will do the stunt. Any way we were mighty glad for the lift as it meant that we could turn in a few hours earlier and the extra sleep was filled with dreams of our Niners winning all the games of the season. Fine work. Come again.

A number of members of an Art Club visited with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hughes last Sunday.

The Memorial Day program for Mokena is coming along in fine shape. Prof. Brown is the chairman for the day. The school children will sing, and the Girl Scouts will take part by giving one of their pleasing drills, and other fine things are in store. The Rev. Mr. Hastings, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church of Joliet will be the speaker of the day. Rev. Hastings comes well recommended and it is hoped Mokena will do worthy homage to the Day by turning out in large numbers.

TINLEY PARK

The youngest member and mascot of the Tinley Park Bunco Club has arrived and it was on Tuesday, May
6th. The new arrival was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Freeberg who are the proud parents of a baby girl.

Miss Pearl Freeberg had a birthday Sunday, but owing to the lateness of getting in from the dance the night before, the party was postponed.
She has everyone's good wishes.

Mr. Knack of Cedar Lake, Ind., the brother of Mrs. H. Hick was here on a visit and when he returned to his home he took Mrs. Stricker with him for a few days.

The big auto truck took Messrs.
A. Mesenbrink, F. Hick, H. Hick and their families and Mr. and Mrs.
Derr of Chicago to the Peterson home near Crete, where Mr. Peterson's birthday was celebrated. All came home by moonlight.

Friends will be glad to know that Mr. G. Keuch is home again from the hospital and all are anxious to see him out again.

Ground is being broken for another new house on the south side.
Mr. Shaffer is putting up this one for himself and family.

The bazaar given by the M. E. church was a big success. The hall was filled and the eats better than all and fancy goods galore. Hand it to the ladies to make a thing go.

The meeting of the M. E. Ladies Aid last Wednesday was quite a crush. If it gets much bigger, they will have to rent a hall. Mrs.
Gotham's house was filled.

Mrs. Clemens spent Wednesday in Chicago.

The Ladies Aid of Zion Lutheran church have started a sewing club and met at Mrs. F. Hopman's last Wednesday. All the Aid ladies are welcome to join.

Mrs. Nieman went to Blue Island Wednesday.

Mrs. Miller spent Wednesday in Chicago visiting with members of her former Ladies Aid.

Miss Mabel Wilke who has been very ill, is slowly improving. We hope to see her entirely well soon.

This is to rectify an error. Mrs.
Goebel hasn't had her hair bobbed.
Yet, but expects to. It was Mrs.
Minnie Mager who had her hair bobbed.

Mrs. Clemens spent Sunday,
Mothers Day with her mother at Wilmette.

Don't come to near Mrs. A. Mes-enbrink when she is ready to throw out a pan of water or you may get a ducking like Mr. Jergen-sen.

At the election Saturday evening the yeas got the new school house and which will be completed on or about September first.

Mrs. Holland and Miss Horn of Chicago visited Mr. and Mrs. Wm.

Scheer Sunday, also Mr. and
Mrs. Kahn of Blue Island and Mrs.
Engel of Gresham.

Mr. and Mrs. Wannemacher had friends from Englewood visiting them Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Koehler are now occupying the house vacated by Mr. Manske.

Mr. and Mrs. Olson, Mr. and Mrs.
H. Hick, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Derr and Mr. and Mrs. A. Mesenbrink spent Mothers Day with mother Hick.

Mr. J. Klepper, Sr., is on the sick list.

The youngest son of Rev. and
Mrs. Zeunner was taken to the St.
Francis hospital at Blue Island on Sunday suffering with plural pneumonia. He was in a critical condition for several days, but at latest reports he was improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Gotham had company from Crown Point, Ind., Sunday.

The pupils of Mrs. Korneman will give a recital and concert at the Saenger hall on the evening of June 5th.

Mrs. Bankow

Sues for Divorce

Mrs. Katherine Bankow, 705
Third Ave., Joliet, has filed suit for separate maintenance against her husband, John Bonkow, Green Garden township land owner, in the circuit court.

In the bill filed by Mrs. Bankow's attorney, it sets forth that the couple married March 16, 1898 at Frankfort and separated May 7th.
There are two children, Harold, 19 and Isabelle 16 years old.

Mrs. Bankow charges that soon after their marriage, 26 years ago, Bankow became cruel and used abusive language toward her on many occasions. She also charges that he has an annual income of $2,400 and asks that she be allowed a sum sufficient to support her.

LAZY HANS

IN A far-off country once there lived a lazy man named Hans; and that was not all the fault he had, for Hans spent much time at the tavern at the end of the village where he lived, and all of his money, too, which in truth was not much.

The only work that Hans ever did was to sit on the bank of the river that flowed by the village and fish.

Sometimes he caught nothing at all; and when he did, as far as his family were concerned, he might just as well have caught nothing, for he sold the fish at the tavern and did not go home until hunger drove him there.

His patient wife did washing to get money for herself and little Hans, or they would have fared hard, so little did big Hans bother with the welfare of his family.

One day as he sat by the river fishing he suddenly felt a tug at the line he was holding. Hans tried to pull in his catch, for he was sure it must weigh many pounds.

But the tugging grew harder as he pulled and Hans wound the line around one wrist and pulled with all his strength.

"From the Water Came a Big Head."

Slowly from the water there came a big head and a wide open mouth. Hans remembered the story of Jonah and the whale and tried to unwind the fishing line from his wrist, but before he could do so the huge fish caught the line in its mouth and jerked poor Hans into the water.

Turning around, the big fish began to swim away, dragging Hans behind him at a furious rate of speed. The bank and the land disappeared from his view as they dashed along. Hans remembered afterwards, though he could never find the place where the big fish suddenly dived under the water, taking him with it.

The next thing Hans knew he found himself standing on the bottom of the river or ocean. He did not know where he was, but on a throne of coral sat a big man with a long, white beard looking at Hans very crossly.

"So you are the lazy fisherman who sells his catch at the tavern," said the man on the throne. "Well, as you will not work on land I will see that you work here in my kingdom. Pick up all

THE STORM

THE thunders crash,
The lightning flash,
The winds blow fiercely free,
But what care I
For tempests high,
And blasts that batter me?
The wind and rain
Speak not of pain,
Or other things of dole,
But Nature's care
To cleanse the air,
And freshen up my soul.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

PAMELA

THE quaintly demure name of Pamela, generally contracted to "Pam" in this country, is a literary name. It owes its prevalence to both the fancy of writers and the fashion for endings in "a," which distinguished Queen Anne's Augustan age. Alicia, Olivia and Lucinda are contemporaries of Pamela, having submitted to the same demand for vowel endings.

About the time that Pope launched Belinda as the heroine of his "Rape of the Lock," and Clarissa was fabricated from the Italian Clarice, the great Richardson adopted Pamela from Sir Philip Sidney's "Arcadia," as a recommendation to the maid servant whom he made his heroine.

English ladies who wished to be en mode, straightway adopted the name, and history of that period is filled with Pamelas. It was a popular name among the nobility, despite its original application to a maid servant, but later it suffered a decline, and became most frequent in the lower classes. Now, however, Pamela has returned to her own, and is again enjoying vogue the shells you see lying around here, and see that you leave not one."

Hans was so scared that he did not dare say what he thought—that he could never in a thousand years pick up all the shells. He meekly went to work, and into a basket which the man on the throne gave him, he put the shells.

His back began to ache and he grew very tired indeed, but always, when he stopped, he saw the man on the throne looking at him and holding in a threatening manner a three-pronged fork that Hans was certain had very sharp points.

Days and days Hans thought he must have worked. He did not remember the nights at all. And then all at once he felt very wet. He hadn't before. He shivered, and to his surprise he found himself in the river beside the bank where he had been fishing when the big fish carried him off.

Hans scrambled up the bank and sat down, rubbing his eyes. "I wonder if I fell asleep," he said, "and dreamed it all." But his back still ached and Hans believed in fairies and goblins and he had no wish to work at the bottom of the ocean again.

"I wonder," thought Hans, "if I sell the fish I catch and carry the money home to Gretchen and little Hans, if the magic folks will let me alone. I believe I will try it and see."

"What ever has happened to lazy Hans?" asked the people in the village. "He does not spend his time or money at the tavern any more, and little Hans and Gretchen look so well and happy."

"It must be the fairies that made the change in him," said one.

"It would have taken more than the fairies to have changed Hans," said another. "My belief is that the goblins carried him off and gave him a sound beating."

But Hans held his peace and never told, and never did he again see the big fish or any of the magic folks, for always he sold the fish he caught and carried the money home to Gretchen and little Hans. And those who do right have no reason to fear the goblins or any of the magic people.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

THE NEW MOON

TO SEE the new moon over the right shoulder brings good luck; over the left shoulder bad luck. This superstition is general throughout England and the United States—except in Alabama where it is said they consider it better to see the new moon first over the left shoulder. It is curious how they should have become "twisted" in Alabama, for the whole explanation of the superstition points to the right shoulder as the fortunate one to see the moon over. The idea of luck in connection with the new moon is a survival from the days when the crescent was the symbol of Isis, "from whom came all that was good and beautiful among men." Thousands of years ago by the banks of the Nile men accounted it lucky to see the symbol of Isis in the sky, as men do today by the banks of the Mississippi—though most of the latter never heard of the goddess. As to the right shoulder part of the superstition that is similar in origin to the superstition about getting out of bed right foot first and springs from an association of ideas, facts and words thus: Most normal people use preferably the "starboard" hand to do things with, which thus becomes the "right" hand to use and by extension the term "right" has come to be applied to all that side of the body. To see the new moon "right" see it over the "right" shoulder. It may be asked why over the shoulder at all? It is because of the idea associated with the word "right" in "right shoulder."

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

BEN BLOWER

"WHAT Ben Blower has is always a little bit better than every one else has." When people said that they smiled.

Mr. Blower was spending the weekend in the country with a club acquaintance whose wife had heard of Mr. Blower but had not met him. Her husband introduced, that Saturday night at dinner, a brisk little man in a black coat that somehow suggested the cut of a robin's tail feathers.

"My husband says that you made a very quick run up from town," Mr. Blower's hostess began.

"Ah, well—my motah, you see," he exploded with his own special pronunciation of words ending in the letter "r."

"You have a fast car?"

"New York to Boston in five hours," said he.

From that the conversation turned to the Pilgrim tercentenary.

"Pilgrims—ah, yes," started off Mr. Blower again. "Can tell you all about the Pilgrims—direct descendant of Miles Standish and Priscilla."

"But Priscilla married John Alden, history tells us," she questioned, hurrying to the rescue of the Puritan maiden.

"History doesn't know everything," said Mr. Blower haughtily. So it went. He told his hostess that he had made and spent sums equal to any fortune.

"You never hear of my income," he explained, "because I spend it on purpose to avoid the income tax." His children were all of the "genius type," his clothes were made in England; his friends were only of the best; and she was made to feel that he refrained from telling her his brand of cigarettes and politics only because such a declaration on his part would be used as advertising and campaign material.

As they parted for the night she said wearily, "I hope you rest well."

"I always rest well," said he.

And she dragged herself up to bed thinking that the blower habit might be harmless and amusing for half an hour in one's club; for a longer period it became quite a different matter.

PLANE RACES TO HALT BANK 'RUN'

Express and Mail Also Used to Save a Springfield, Mo., Institution.

Springfield, Mo.—With more than one million dollars received by airplane, registered mail and express, the Union National bank has overcome a "run" which started late Saturday afternoon and continued at night, but which dwindled and died before increasing confidence Monday.

There was a good-sized crowd in front of the bank when it opened an hour before time Monday morning. It slowly dispersed when it was learned that an airplane from St. Louis carrying $400,000 in currency from the First National bank of St. Louis had reached the city. The bank also sent $100,000 currency by registered mail in addition to $75,000 sent last Friday.

Kansas City banks sent $250,000 to the bank, to be used in case of an emergency.

The money from Kansas City was nearly all the currency that could be found Saturday night, as time locks on most of the bank vaults were set for Monday morning.

Of the amount sent, two theaters furnished $12,000, the Union station $30,000, a large restaurant $7,500, and savings banks $30,500.

Although the bank's regular closing hour is 4 o'clock, the doors remained open until after 6 o'clock Monday night to give any depositor a chance to withdraw.

Bank officials announced that there had been only scattering withdrawals during the day; in fact, no greater than any Monday morning, while the deposits were heavier than any day in history. One corporation deposited $50,000, brought from another city, to show its confidence in the institution.

Doctor Eliot Insists the Dry Law Is Good

New York.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, has replied to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia, taking the opposite view of the prohibition enforcement question from that expounded by his New York colleague in the latter's recent speech at the Missouri society dinner. Dr. Eliot says that prohibition is being better and better enforced and "its complete enforcement will follow after a time upon the appointment of enforcing officers on the merit system instead of the 'spoils' system."

French Radicals Beat Poincare; Must Get Out

Paris.—The complete returns in the French election accentuate the smashing victory of the left parties and the tremendous losses of the Poincare-Millerand "national bloc," which has dominated the chamber of deputies during the last four years. Already the left newspapers are calling on President Millerand to "go to Versailles," meaning to summon the senate and chamber to the historic chateau to select a new president.

Congressman Langley Is Convicted of Rum Plot

Covington, Ky.—A jury in federal court here found Congressman John W. Langley (Rep., Ky.) guilty of conspiracy in connection with a whisky transaction in 1921. The jury returned its verdict after deliberating three hours and forty minutes. The maximum sentence for conviction is two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

Finds Offset to Deadly Gas of the Automobile

New York.—Dr. Miller Reese Hutchinson announced that he had discovered a chemical compound, the use of which in combination with commercial gasoline, virtually eliminates all danger from toxic discharges of the deadly carbon monoxide from the exhausts of automobiles.

3 High School Students Die in Auto-Train Crash

Martinsville, Ill.—Irene Shafer, sixteen; Carlton Payne, seventeen, and Helen Fraker, sixteen, local high school students, were killed when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Pennsylvania passenger train at a crossing near here.

He saw the plan now—an admirable plan. They were to meet near the port of sailing and be married and go aboard the ship and away. It was the plan of Margaret and much better than any he could have made, for he knew little of London and its ports.

"Should I not take my baggage with me?"

"There is not time for that," the veiled lady answered. "We must make haste. I have some clothes for you in a bag."

She pointed to a leather case under the front seat.

From that time forward they rode in a silence broken only by the creaking of the coach and the sound of the horses' hoofs. Darkness had fallen when they reached the little city of Gravesend. The Ship and Anchor stood by the water's edge.

"You will please wait here," said the stern lady in a milder voice than she had used before, as the coach drew up at the inn door. "I shall see if she has come."

His strange companion entered the inn and returned presently, saying: "She has not yet arrived. Delayed by the fog. We will have our dinner, if you please."

From this point the scene at the inn is described in the diary of the American.

"She drew off her hat and veil and a young woman about twenty-eight years of age and of astonishing beauty stood before me."

"There, now, I am out or business," she remarked in a pleasant voice as she sat down at the table which had been spread before the fireplace. "I will do my best to be a companion to you until Margaret arrives."

"She looked into my eyes and smiled. Her sheath of ice had fallen from her."

"The waiter came with a tray containing soup, glasses and a bottle of sherry. We sat down at the table and our waiter filled two glasses with the sherry."

"Thank you, but self-denial is another duty of mine," she remarked when I offered her a glass of the wine. "I live in a tipsy world and drink—water. I live in a merry world and keep a stern face. It is a vile world and yet I am unpolluted."

"I drank my glass of wine and had begun to eat my soup when a strange feeling came over me. My plate seemed to be sinking through the table. The wall and fireplace were receding into dim distance. I knew then that I had tasted the cup of Circe. My hands fell through my lap and suddenly the day ended. It was like sawing off a board. The end had fallen. There is nothing more to be said of it because my brain had ceased to receive and record impressions. I was as totally out of business as a man in his grave. When I came to, I was in a berth on the ship King William bound for New York. As soon as I knew anything, I knew that I had been tricked. My clothes had been removed and were lying on a chair near me. My watch and money were undisturbed. I had a severe pain in my head. I dressed and went up on deck. The captain was there."

"You must have had a night of it in Gravesend," he said. "You were like a dead man when they brought you aboard."

"Where am I going?" I asked.

"To New York," he answered with a laugh. "You must have had a time!"

"How much is the fare?"

"Young man, that need not concern you," said the captain. "Your fare has been paid in full. I saw them put a letter in your pocket. Have you read it?"

Jack found the letter and read:

"Dear Sir—When you see this you will be well out of danger and it is hoped, none the worse for your disposition. This from one who admires your skill and courage and who advises you to keep out of England for at least a year."

"A WELL WISHER."

He looked back over the stern of the ship. The shore had fallen out of sight. The sky was clear. The sun shined. The wind was blowing from the east.

He stood for a long time looking toward the land he had left.

"Oh, ye wings of the wind! take my love to her and give her news of me and bid her to be steadfast in her faith and hope," he whispered.

CHAPTER XII

The Girl He Left Behind Him.

After Jack had been whirled out of London, Franklin called at his lodgings and learned that he had not been seen for a day. The wise philosopher entertained no doubt that the young man had taken ship agreeably with the advice given him. A report had been running through the clubs of London that Lionel Clarke had succumbed. In fact he had had a bad turn, but had rallied. Jack must have heard the false report and taken ship suddenly.

Doctor Franklin went that day to the meeting of the privy council, whither he had been sternly summoned for examination in the matter of the letters of Hutchinson et al. For an hour he had stood unmoved while Alexander Wedderburn, the wittiest barrister in the kingdom, poured upon him a torrent of abuse. Even the judges, against all traditions of decorum in the high courts of Britain, laughed at the cleverness of the assault. That was the speech of which Charles James Fox declared that it was the most expensive bit of oratory which had been heard in England, since it had cost the kingdom its colonies.

It was alleged that in some manner Franklin had stolen the letters and violated their sacred privacy. It is known now that an English nobleman had put them in his hands to read and that he was in no way responsible for their publication. The truth, if it could have been told, would have bent the proud heads of Wedderburn and the judges to whom he appealed, in confusion. But Franklin held his peace, as a man of honor was bound to do. He stood erect and dignified with a face like one carved in wood.

The counsel for the colonies made a weak defense. The triumph was complete. The venerable man was convicted of conduct inconsistent with the character of a gentleman and deprived of his office as postmaster general of the colonies.

But he had two friends in court. They were the Lady Hare and her daughter. They followed him out of the chamber. In the great hallway, Margaret, her eyes wet with tears, embraced and kissed the philosopher.

"I want you to know that I am your friend and that I love America," she said.

"My daughter, it has been a hard hour, but I am sixty-eight years old and have learned many things," he answered. "Time is the only avenger I need. It will lay the dust."

The girl embraced and kissed him again and said in a voice shaking with emotion:

"I wish my father and all Englishmen to know that I am your friend and that I have a love that cannot be turned aside or destroyed and that I will have my right as a human being."

"Come let us go and talk together—we three," he proposed.

They took a cab and drove away. "You will think all this a singular proceeding," Lady Hare remarked. "I must tell you that rebellion has started in our home. Its peace is quite destroyed. Margaret has declared her right to the use of her own mind."

"Well, if she is to use any mind it will have to be that one," Franklin answered. "I do not see why women should not be entitled to use their minds as well as their hands and feet."

"I was kept at home yesterday by force," said Margaret. "Every door locked and guarded! It was brutal tyranny."

"The poor child has my sympathy, but what can I do?" Lady Hare inquired.

"Being an American, you can expect but one answer from me," said the philosopher. "To us tyranny in home or state is intolerable. They tried it on me when I was a boy and I ran away."

"That is what I shall do if necessary," said Margaret.

"Oh, my child! How would you live?" her mother asked.

"I will answer that question for her, if you will let me," said Franklin. "If she needs it, she shall have an allowance out of my purse."

"Thank you, but that would raise a scandal," said the woman.

"Oh, your ladyship, I am old enough to be her grandfather."

"I wish to go with Jack, if you know where he is," Margaret declared, looking up into the face of the philosopher.

"I think he is pushing toward America," Franklin answered. "Being alarmed at the condition of his adversary, I advised him to slip away. A ship went yesterday. Probably he's on it. He had no chance to see me or pick up his baggage."

"I shall follow him soon," the girl declared.

"If you will only contain yourself, you will get along with your father very well," said Lady Hare. "I know him better than you. He has promised to take you to America in December. You must wait and be patient. After all, your father has a large claim upon you."

"I think you will do well to wait, my child," said the philosopher. "Jack will keep and you are both young. Fathers are like other children. They make mistakes—they even do wrong now and then. They have to be forgiven and allowed a chance to repent and improve their conduct. Your father is a good man. Try to win him to your cause."

"And die a maiden," said the girl with a sigh.

"Impossible!" Franklin exclaimed. "I shall marry Jack or never marry. I would rather be his wife than the queen of England."

"This is surely the age of romance," said the smiling philosopher as the ladies alighted at their door. "I wish I were young again."

CHAPTER XIII

The Ferment.

On his voyage to New York, Jack wrote long letters to Margaret and to Doctor Franklin, which were deposited in the post office on his arrival, the tenth of March. He observed a great change in the spirit of the people. They were no longer content with words. The ferment was showing itself in acts of open and violent disorder. The statue of George III, near the battery, was treated to a volley of decayed eggs, in the evening of his arrival. This hot blood was due to the effort to prevent free speech in the colonies and the proposal to send political prisoners to England for trial.

Jack took the first boat to Albany and found Solomon working on the iron farm. In his diary he tells of the delightful days of rest he enjoyed with his family. Solomon had told them of the great adventure but Jack would have little to say of it, having no pride in that achievement.

Soon the scout left on a mission for the committee of safety to distant settlements in the great north bush.

"I'll be spendin' the hull moon in the wilderness," he said to Jack. "Goin' to Virginy when I get back, an' I'll look fer ye on the way down."

Jack set out for Philadelphia the day after Solomon left. He stopped at Kinderhook on his way down the river and addressed his people on conditions in England. A young Tory interrupted his remarks. At the barbecue, which followed, this young man was seized and punished by a number of stalwart girls who removed his collar and jacket by force and covered his head and neck with molasses and the fuzzi of cat tails. Jack interceded for the Tory and stopped the proceeding.

"My friends, we must control our anger," he said. "Let us not try to subdue tyranny by using it ourselves."

Everywhere he found the people in such a temper that Tories had to hold their peace or suffer punishment. At the office he learned that his most important letters had failed to pass the hidden censorship of mail in England. He began, at once, to write a series of articles which hastened the crisis. The first of them was a talk with Franklin, which told how his mail had been tampered with; that no letter had come to his hand through the post office which had not been opened with apparent indifference as to the evidence of its violation. The Doctor's was regarding free speech in America and the proposal to try the bolder critics for treason were read and discussed in every household from the sea to the mountains and from Maine to Florida.

The young man's work had set the bells ringing and they were the bells of revolt. The arrival of General Gage at Boston in May, to be civil governor and commander-in-chief for the continent, and the blockade of the port twenty days later, compelling its population who had been fed by the sea to starve or subsist on the bounty of others, drove the most conservative citizens into the open. Parties went out Tory hunting. Every suspected man was compelled to declare himself and if incorrigible, was sent away. Town meetings were held even under the eyes of the king's soldiers and no tribunal was allowed to sit in any court house. At Salem, a meeting was held behind locked doors with the governor and his secretary shouting a proclamation through its keyhole, declaring it to be dissolved. The meeting proceeded to its end, and when the citizens filed out, they had invited the thirteen colonies to a general congress in Philadelphia.

It was Solomon Binkus who conveyed the invitation to Pennsylvania and Virginia. He had gone on a second mission to Springfield and Boston and had been in the meeting at Salem with General Ward. Another man carried that historic call to the colonies farther south. In five weeks, delegates were chosen, and early in August, they were traveling on many different roads toward the Quaker city. Crowds gathered in every town and village they passed. Solomon, who rode with the Virginia delegation, told Jack that he hadn't heard so much noise since the Injun war.

"They was poundin' the bells, an' shootin' cannons everywhere," he declared. "Men, women and children crowded 'round us an' split their lungs yellin'. They's a streak o' sore throats all the way from Alexandria to here."

Poppy Tea Had a Kick

The government won the first case of the kind and ruined the prospects for a thriving opium business when Soba Singh, a Hindu, was convicted in Federal Judge Bean's court in Portland, Ore., after the jury had deliberated only 20 minutes, says the Los Angeles Times.

Soba Singh had discovered the cheapest method of extracting opium, that of boiling the poppy down to a thick tea, which was a favorite beverage with the Hindus of the city. Negroes in the north end were selling the tea as moonshine, government agents discovered, and patrons of these bootleggers were becoming addicts without knowing it.

Lesson for May 18

ISAIAH AND THE ASSYRIAN CRISIS.

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 36, 37.
GOLDEN TEXT—"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."—Ps. 46:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Answered Their Letter.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Isaiah and the Boastful Assyrian.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Isaiah's Faith Saved a City.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Isaiah's Service to His Country.

I. The King of Assyria Invades Judah (Isa. 36).

1. Rabshakeh Meets a Deputation From Judah (vv. 1-21). Rabshakeh was a representative of Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, whose mission was to induce Judah to surrender. In order to accomplish this he:

(1) Tried to bully them into submission (vv. 4-9). He taunted them with their weakness and told them that Egypt was a broken reed that would not only fail of support but even pierce the hand that reached out to it. He challenged them by offering 2,000 horses, if they would furnish riders for them. If they could not furnish this small number it would be futile for them to attempt to withstand the great Assyrian army.

(2) He asserted that it was useless for them to put their trust in God (v. 10). He even declared that the Lord had sent him to destroy Judah.

(3) He tried to create a panic among the people (vv. 13-21). Fearing a panic among the people the deputation of the Jews urged Rabshakeh not to speak in the Jews' language. Taking up the suggestion he spoke loudly in the Jews' language, warning them against trusting in Hezekiah.

(4) He promised them plenty in another land similar to their own (vv. 16, 17). He urged them to make agreement with him and upon his return from Egypt he would take them to a land of plenty, but the people were loyal to Hezekiah, for they knew that the cruel Assyrians could not be trusted.

2. The Deputation Reports to Hezekiah (v. 22). They rent their garments doubtless in fear and dismay over their perilous condition, for the crisis long before predicted by Isaiah had now come upon them.

II. Hezekiah's Behavior (Isa. 37: 1-35).

1. Resorted to the House of the Lord (v. 1). This is a sure resort of God's people in time of distress (Ps. 73:16, 17; 77:13). This action was prompted by faith, for God had promised that those who in time of distress resorted to His house would be heard by Him (II Chron. 7:15, 16).

2. Sent Isaiah (vv. 2-7). The logical and natural thing for the king to do under such circumstances was to send for God's prophet. The prophet sent back words of encouragement to Hezekiah, assuring him that God would bring deliverance.

3. Hezekiah's Prayer (vv. 14-20). Rabshakeh, who seems to have withdrawn from Jerusalem for a little while, now returns from Sennacherib with a letter warning Hezekiah against trusting God for deliverance, assuring him that he would be deceived for no god was able to stand against the Assyrian army. He spread the letter before the Lord and prayed.

(1) He recognized God's throne, making it the ground of his plea (v. 16).

(2) He recognized the peril which threatened the people (vv. 17-19). Sennacherib had indeed laid waste the surrounding nations, but that ruin resulted because the gods of the nations were not real.

(3) He asked for deliverance (v. 20). He desired that deliverance would come in such a way as to vindicate and honor the Lord.

4. Isaiah's Message to Hezekiah (vv. 21-35).

(1) That Sennacherib's sin was blasphemy against the Holy One of Israel (vv. 21-23).

(2) That Sennacherib had forgotten that he was an instrument in God's hand (vv. 24-28).

(3) Judgment upon Sennacherib was imminent (vv. 29-35). Deliverance would soon come and that through the energy of the Lord of hosts.

III. Destruction of the Assyrian Army (vv. 36-38).

The angel of the Lord went forth and smote in the camp of the Assyrians 185,000 men, so Sennacherib was turned back by the way he came. He did not enter Jerusalem and after this defeat he went back to Nineveh to live and while there worshipping in the house of his god he was assassinated.

In One's Home

It is often easier to pose as a philanthropist abroad than to be known as kind, reasonable and unselfish in one's home.

Giving Thanks

Giving thanks for what we have is a good preventive against whining about what we have not.

Rearing the Child

In bringing up a child, think of its old age.—Joubert.

The cigar he smokes is a part of a man's individuality. That's why millions smoke DUTCH MASTERS cigars.

Several states in the Union, it is said, are still without women dentists. Logic either proves or disproves all things, but it doesn't accomplish any of them.
